GERMAN SPECIALTIES

SCHNAPPS IS NOT SCHNAPS!

In Germany, the word Schnaps refers to clear alcoholic beverages distilled from fermented cereals, roots or fruits. German Schnaps has no sugar or flavoring added. Schnaps is similar in flavour and consistency to vodka, with light fruit flavours, depending on the base material. The alcohol content is usually around 40% by volume. Traditionally, schnaps is served ice-cold in shots as part of a meal. Across Germany, it's drunk neat, quickly and generally with a toast.
